

Slavcho Aleksovski is an experienced full-time professor at the Faculty of Technological and metallurgy in Skopje at the University of Ss. Cyril and Methodius, Republic of North Macedonia. He is one of the leading experts in the field of chemical engineering, with a proven track record of working in the higher education industry. He is skilled in pyrolysis, biofuels, biodiesel production, supercritical CO₂ extraction, process simulation, chemical process equipment design, research and development (R&D), chemical engineering, and reaction engineering. His main interests are the circular economy, recycling, conversion, and valorization of solid and liquid waste into value-added products. He is the author of more than 30 printed scientific papers published in well-known journals. He is the main researcher and participant in several scientific projects.

